

the Valentine ONE

by Guru Mani H

“Will you be my Valentine and take a step with me?”
[to see what fate has for us if together we would be].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [I’d love to say to you;
though what would be your answer, I haven’t got a clue].

“Will you be my Valentine another year and more?”
[embrace together with me what the future has in store].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [are words that I’ll not hear;
the time when someone loves me, is far from being near].

“Will you be my Valentine or are you not yet ready?”
[to take a step and run the risk that all becomes unsteady].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [so many to me said;
but all they really wanted, was to get into my bed].

“Will you be my Valentine because I am in love?”
[we fit so well together like a hand into a glove].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [means nothing any more;
the one I loved betrayed me, and it’s left my heart so sore].

“Will you be my Valentine or shall we just stay friends?”
[I don’t know should we cross the line in case our friendship ends].

“Will u b my Valentine?” [or is this all too quick;
and I have now messed up my chance, with just a single click].

“Will you be my Valentine although I’ve hurt you bad?”
[I hope you can forgive me to restore what we once had].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [I’m far too scared to say;
in case the answer from your lips, sends us our separate ways].

“Will you be my Valentine my best friend and my lover?”
[and stay with me forever never leaving for another].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [or am I way off beam;
and you don’t view me in that way, so I can only dream].

“Will you be my Valentine and give to me your heart?”
[then stay with me through thick and thin and never from me part].

“Will you be my Valentine?” [is not a question stupid;
as I believe our very fate, was all planned out by Cupid].
